

High-latitude circulation in the Atlantic Ocean

This multi-national program (OSNAP; www.o-snap.org) studies the connection between deep water mass formation, overturning circulation, and climate variability in the subpolar North Atlantic Ocean. Students participate in research cruises and investigate deep currents and large-scale ocean transport processes.

